PROBE CHARGE WPA LAID OFF MARRIED MEN

House Committee Looking Into Columbiana County Situation

ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS STUDIED

Ohio Expenditures High
According to Agent's
Testimony

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, May 16.—George Shillito, an investigator for the house committee looking into the WPA, said a complaint that married men had been laid off by the WPA in Columbiana county, O., while single men were retained, had been received from the Workers' Progressive organization.
Asked by members of the house committee investigating WPA as to what basis he had found the allegation, Shillito said he had learned that 18 former soldiers had been discharged in April and that some of them were married men. One of the latter, he testified, had eight dependents.
Shillito said also he knew that some single men still were employed by the WPA in Columbiana county.
Asked whether the Workers' Progressive organization had not charged that married men were laid off in order to bring pressure on congress for large WPA appropriations, the investigator said he could not say definitely.

Costs Under Scrutiny

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The house committee investigating WPA weighed today testimony from one of its agents that Ohio WPA administrative costs were permitted under special authorization from Harry L. Hopkins, to equal between 8 and 9 per cent of total expenditures, instead of 5 per cent which Representative Goodrum (O.-Va.) said was the legal limit.
The committee investigator, George J. Shillito, said yesterday it was made possible by a "state apply fund project" which Secretary of Commerce Hopkins authorized when he was federal administrator.
This project, Shillito said, included 1,200 workers handling general WPA operations, although there were $1,119 persons already employed as administrative employees. The engineer was asked about Canton, O., stadium erected by

Will Follow Two Routes
In Accordance With Council Franchise

Owners of the Kirby Lines, Inc., announced today that they would place two buses in operation here tomorrow morning on the two routes which they outlined to city council sometime ago.

Thomas E. Kirby, president of the lines said that bus service would be available to residents of the city commencing Wednesday. The two new buses were expected to be delivered here late today by the manufacturers, the Bender Body Co., of Cleveland. Kirby said they have a seating capacity of 19 and standing room for 15 passengers.

The hours of service will be from 6 a. m. to 9:30 p. m. daily according to the provisions of the 10-year franchise granted Kirby Lines by city council. Buses will run at 20-minute intervals.

The company, in starting, will operate buses on these two routes: North and south on N. and S. Ellsworth ave. from Aetna st. to the 1550 block on N. Ellsworth ave.

East and west on E. State st. from the corporation limits near City hospital to join the Ellsworth ave. route downtown.

The fare, according to franchise, will be 10 cents, or three fares for 25 cents, the latter being in the form of tickets. School children, including those going to and from church Sunday, will pay only a five-cent fare for passage.

There will be no charge for children five years of age, or under, when accompanied by a fare-paying passenger.

Transfers will be given when desired.

L. G. STEUARD, 27, CAUGHT UNDER 10-FOOT SLIDE

Rescued, Apparently Uninjured, After Being
"Buried Alive"

HARVEY BAKER FREES HIMSELF

Dirt Lets Go As Steuard
Works at Bottom of 10-Foot Pit

Lester G. Steuard, 27, of Washingtonville, formerly of Salem, narrowly escaped death by suffocation this morning when sides of a hole he was helping to dig caved-in, trapping him in 10 feet of earth.

Rescuers worked for an hour before freeing Steuard from the upright position in which he was pinned when the cave-in occurred at 9 a. m. at the home of his uncle, Harvey Baker, of Main st., Washingtonville.

When freed, he was given a preliminary examination for possible injuries, then ordered to bed to rest, pending a more complete examination later today. The doctor said as far as he could determine from the early examination, Steuard had suffered no serious injuries.

The cave-in occurred while Steuard was working with his uncle, digging a hole for a septic tank.

No Chance to Escape

Steuard, who was digging in the deepest part of the hole, approximately 10 feet from the surface of the earth, had no chance to escape when the sides suddenly collapsed. He apparently attempted to protect himself from the falling dirt because his arms were pinned above him.

Baker was also caught in the cave-in, but the dirt covered him only up to his knees. He was standing at the top of the hole when the sides gave way.

Baker freed his legs from the loose dirt, shouting for help at the same time. Neighbors heard his calls and came running to the scene.

Working frantically but carefully with hands and shovels, five Washingtonville men removed enough dirt in five minutes to free Steuard's entire body was freed. As the dirt was being removed, rescuers boarded up the sides of the hole to prevent another cave-in.

While the rescuers were working to free the lower part of his body, Steuard was wrapped in blankets and given a stimulant to keep his body warm and ward off the danger of a severe cold.

The rescue work was performed by Lynn J. Davis, Ted Davis, Louis Stouffer, Frank Stouffer, Jr., and Robert Weikart.

Steuard formerly lived on Rose ave. in Salem. He has been living with his uncle since his mother died last winter.

As Coal Miners Returned

Miners at Graham, Ky.

Ending a two-week strike, miners return to work following the settlement of a dispute between the soft coal operators and the United Mine Workers of America. This view is from Graham, Ky., as miners went back to their jobs. Meanwhile, troops were sent into the Harlan, Ky., area where operators refused to sign the New York agreement covering a "union shop."

Harlan Operators, Miners Consider Peace Overtures

Meanwhile, Augmented Force of National Guard Patrols Off-Bloody Labor Battle Ground

(By Associated Press)

HARLAN, Ky., May 16.—"Peace" overtures between coal operators and the United Mine Workers held the major attention of this off-bloody labor battleground today while an augmented force of national guardsmen deployed to "protect" re-opening of further mines.

A separate conference with the union was scheduled by Supt. E. J. Asbury of the Black Mountain Coal corporation at Kenvir, normally employing 600 men, and there were prospects that members of the Harlan County Coal Operators association also might resume negotiations.

Expects Three Contracts

William Turnblazer of Jellico, Tenn., president of the Harlan U. M. W. district, said he expected to sign contracts with three coal companies of the Harlan area, but refused to name them.

Operators of Kentucky's Hazard district prepared to chart their future course at a meeting today in Lexington and mine owners and union men of the Big Sandy-Elkhorn district considered resuming their conversations at Ashland.

The three Kentucky-district operators declined to join 15 other soft coal districts in approving new contracts at the New York conference Saturday.

Col. Roy W. Easley of the guardsmen here reported troops had been asked by 13 Harlan mines additional to the six he said operated under guard yesterday, when 200 more soldiers were ordered into this county by Gov. A. B. Chandler to aid the 557 already on patrol duty.

Will Try to Keep Peace

Brig. Gen. Elmer Carter, commanding the militiamen, said Turnblazer and George Tiller, secretary of the Harlan U. M. W. district, had promised they would "endeavor" to maintain peaceful picketing.

Meanwhile, a federal investigation of the Kentucky mobilization was suggested by John L. Lewis, chief of the congress of industrial organizations and the U. M. W., in a speech last night at Philadelphia.

Roosevelt Informed of Program at White House Parley

MORE MEETINGS ARE SCHEDULED

Repeal of Profits Tax,
Aid for Small Firms
Necessary

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, May 16.—A powerful senate bloc, led by Chairman Harrison (D-Miss) of the finance committee, expressed determination today to write a new business tax program of its own unless President Roosevelt orders thorough revision of present levies.

Harrison, it was learned, told the President of this intention at a White House conference last night.

Further Meetings Seen
The administration's final attitude, however, probably will not be made known until legislative leaders hold further meetings with Mr. Roosevelt.

At the White House with Harrison yesterday were Chairman Doughton (D-NC) of the house ways and means committee, Rep. Cooper (D-Tenn.), Secretary Morgenthau and Undersecretary Hanes of the treasury.

Doughton said no conclusions were reached.
"We will have some kind of a tax bill, of course," he added. "What changes will be made I am unable to say."

Harrison and his associates contend that repeal of the undistributed profits tax, creation of a flat corporation tax to about 18 per cent, more liberal allowances for corporation losses, and continued favored treatment for small firms are necessary to stimulate business improvement.

Similar to Early Program
This program closely resembles one formulated some time ago by treasury experts and understood to have Morgenthau's support. The treasury plan provides for repeal of the undistributed profits and capital stock taxes and enactment of a flat corporation levy of 22 per cent. Harrison would not repeal the capital stock tax.

Among senators the belief was that unless Mr. Roosevelt gives the signal for changes, the house will confine its action on business levies to passing a simple resolution extending the present corporation tax schedule which expires Dec. 31.

Leaders of the revision bloc said that if this occurred, they could marshal sufficient senate votes to write a new schedule along Harrison's lines. Business sentiment, they declared, would force the house and the administration to accept it.

They contend that either the Harrison or treasury plan would meet all the standards for revision which Mr. Roosevelt has laid down in the past. These are that federal revenue (amounting to $1,300,000,000 from corporation taxes) must not be cut, that small corporations must be given special consideration, and that loopholes for tax evaders, closed by the law, must be kept closed.

IT CAN'T BE HELPED—OR CAN IT.

Increasing worry over possibility of foreign policy becoming a controlling political issue by 1940 can't be helped. It's not the first time foreign policy has been in politics. Worriers will have to make the best of their troubles. International affairs can't be called off for their peace of mind.

The thing to remember is that not all of them are critics of President Roosevelt. Some are his admirers. Foreign policy is a two-edged sword when wielded in national elections. Its wielder is in almost as much danger of cutting himself as of cutting the opposition. Woodrow Wilson discovered that.

True, as authoritarians have been demonstrating lately, foreign policy is a convenient way to rally popular support. By projecting an issue outside the country, popular attention can be diverted from domestic affairs. It is a trick which works only for dictators, however. Where there is freedom of opinion and free exchange of information it does not deceive.

If, as seems probable, Mr. Roosevelt intends to keep up his campaign of aligning this government with Great Britain and France, it is obvious that the outcome, as far as effect on public opinion is concerned, will depend on how well those countries "sell" themselves to Americans as potential allies in the next year. That is a thing Mr. Roosevelt can't control. It seems useless, therefore, to worry very much about the effect on 1940.

PEACE AND WAR BOOMS

H. R. Knickerbocker, has performed distinguished service in European reporting by reminding readers that Germany must continue to threaten war because it is unprepared for peace.

Its national economy is geared to the needs of the mobilization which has reestablished the reich as a major military power. Knickerbocker points out. Peace would wreck the war boom which has enabled Germany to boast that it has no unemployment.

But in explaining how German mobilization has caused similar mobilization in Great Britain and France, which in the long run will be better prepared to fight than Germany can be prepared, due to its more limited resources, Knickerbocker makes a point.

He does not say what obviously is true, that the British and the French also are gearing their economies to mobilization needs. They, too, will reach a point where peace will mean, not relief, but economic disaster if the war boom collapses.

Many economists in the years since the World war have discussed intelligently the effect of war booms and forewarned of their effect on the cause of peace. War preparedness booms are different only in degree, not in kind. Even the United States, desiring peace, cannot be oblivious of the fact that its preparations for war will make peace possible only at the expense of economic dislocation if the stimulus of war manufactures be removed.

OH SURE—CONSUMERS

With no way of knowing what the national monopoly committee was driving at, its attention to the typical experiences of a Chicago housewife in the course of its investigation is mighty encouraging.

The consumer is the fellow who makes the economic system click. His likes and dislikes and the way he spends his money are at the bottom of the whole thing—that and whether or not he has enough money to spend.

Yet, when gentlemen with high foreheads begin to wrinkle their cranial frontage to find out what's wrong they rarely think of asking the consumer. Instead, they delve into the effect the consumer's troubles are having on business.

When they set up machinery to correct this and that, furthermore, they set it up with the producer in mind nine times out of 10. It's recalled there was a consumer's counsel in NRA and on one or two of the original New Deal agencies, but they apparently spent their time quietly in the background—with the rest of the consumers.

AT LEAST THERE'LL BE NO BOOK

If all the gold braid and silk hats taken out of storage for the visit of England's king and queen were laid end to end, the royal visitors could travel from the Atlantic to the Pacific and never see an ordinary American.

Fortunately, the stuff won't be laid end to end; it will just seem that way. Besides, the king and queen aren't going to make an extended journey. They are going to hit a few high spots and return to England.

It will be another American journey, in the fashion of many English journeys to the United States. It will be, in fact, a journey in the fashion of so many visitors to all parts of the world—a handful of impressions capable of sustaining a wagonload of generalizations.

As the king and queen begin it there's only one bright spot in the prospect, as far as their American hosts are concerned. At least they won't need to write a book about their impressions, to defray the overhead.

HARASSED BUNDLES

There is no quarrel with American citizens of German extraction who want to honor that extraction by preserving the culture which is its heritage.

But National Socialism, Adolf Hitler style, is not recognized abroad as German culture. It is characterized in its effect on Germans in foreign countries by such excesses as the murder of Dollfus in Austria, overthrow of Czechoslovakia and—in the United States—by uniformed men who display the Nazi swastika with the American flag and desecrate the memory of George Washington by displaying his picture at mass meetings of the German-American bund.

Part of the strategy of Nazi penetration is to play the martyr's role. Thus, the harassed bundles of the United States are claiming persecution because certain moderate steps to curb them have been taken. They will get the sympathy they deserve on the basis of what they stand for; it won't be much.

In fact, this day may call for very drastic and decisive action, which, however, should not be permitted to have inharmonious reactions on the personal life. Profitable and harmonious relations may be fostered by compromise, subtlety and friendliness rather than with ruthless measures. Intrigue or curious phases may prevail in the very personal contacts. Undulant Fever Queries Answered By Clendening

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

A CLERGYMAN in New York State has asked me a number of questions about undulant fever. Undulant fever (or Malta Fever, or Bang's Disease) is a chronic infection of goats and cattle which may be transmitted to man in milk. Its principal characteristic is a very prolonged fever, with the ordinary accompaniments of fever, fatigue and lassitude.

It is something like typhoid fever, especially in that its presence can be detected by an examination of the blood. This examination does not depend on the revelation of the germs, but on an immune reaction. The immune reaction is a protective device and is present as long as the patient lives (with some exceptions).

The questions which my clergyman correspondent asks are quite intelligent, and are the result of a somewhat confused state of opinion on the subject at present. He evidently has been talking to a number of doctors in order to get an intelligent opinion in order to guide his flock.

He asks: "Is it the presence of the germs themselves or their toxins, or antibodies in the blood that show that a person has undulant fever?"

The germs of undulant fever cannot be isolated from the blood except by very complicated methods. What happens when the body is affected is that antibodies which cause the germs to clump are produced. So the laboratory clinician takes a drop of blood from a suspected individual and adds the serum to a group of the germs from a culture. If after an hour they are clumped together it is generally considered that the patient has, or has had, undulant fever. Another test is like the tuberculin test on the skin. Both these tests can be demonstrated a long time after the acute stage of the disease has disappeared.

His next question is: "If a person feels fairly well six months after a severe attack but still has a positive blood, is it advisable to take further treatment or merely continue to rest?"

On general principles we would say that, as explained above, a positive test would not mean anything for several years after a severe attack.

But the catch comes in the sentence "feels fairly well."

An investigation of the general subject by Dr. Angie and Dr. Algie was made in the school children of Kansas City, Kansas. They began by wondering whether such large milk consumers as children could have a chronic form of undulant fever, which had never been severe enough to result in an acute prostration.

In about nine per cent they found that the skin test was positive. Impressed by this rather surprising information, they decided to question parents to ascertain the occurrence of chronic complaints in their children.

Symptoms Found
Such complaints as recurrent headaches, rheumatic symptoms, occasional spells of fever and nervous symptoms were found very frequently in those who had positive skin tests. For instance, there was 34 per cent of rheumatic symptoms in the positives compared to 6 per cent in a group of controls.

The possibility of chronic undulant infection then was indicated not so much by the positive tests as by the combination of positive test and symptoms.

The possibility that many children who show what might be called general bad health really may have chronic undulant fever is emphasized by these studies. The possibility gains emphasis when we remember how common the disease is in herds of dairy cattle throughout the United States.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 19 cents in coin for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, 235 W. 45th St., New York City. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

SYDNEY, Australia — Australia leads the world in the fight against malnutrition, according to a worldwide survey by the League of Nations. An examination here of a cross-section of 3,300 children of Australia showed only 17.2 per cent showed evidence of unsatisfactory nutrition, that percentage being the lowest of all the countries studied.

"The Doctor" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

CHAPTER XIX

Then one night he was to go there alone, and Beverly had promised him a quiet evening; and of all things on earth he had fallen asleep on a street car and wakened at the end of the line, miles out of town.

He telephoned as soon as he could, but she was annoyed and showed him that she was not in the mood for his calls.

"What in the world happened? Where are you?"

"I don't know exactly."

"You don't know?"

"Only approximately. You see, I was on a car, hurrying home for a divine evening with you. Then I shut my eyes for a minute—only a minute—and when I opened them again, I was here. The magic carpet, no less."

"You went to sleep?" she said incredulously. "That's not very flattering to me, is it? Of course if you think it's funny—"

"Funny! My dear girl, I'm laughing for fear I'll weep."

She had laughed, too, at that, but he knew her pride, and she had not repeated the invitation.

After all, what was he to her or to that group around her, but something between a butler and a glorified midwife? Young Ames grinning at him.

"How's the baby business these days?"

"Still paying dividends."

"By Jove, you fellows have a cinch. You get us coming and going. Even nature works for you!"

"We have to help her a bit now and then."

"Better change your mind and have a drink."

"I have some calls to make. I'll take tea instead."

And even that, his inability to drink during working hours, marking him off, setting him aside.

Not coherent thinking, all this. It was a series of pictures in his mind: of Beverly, cool and lovely, trying to marshal her disorderly horde of occasional glimpses of her mother, and even one encounter with Staunton Lewis in the hall and his own sudden rigidity when he remembered Jake.

"Pretty noisy crowd, Doctor?"

"They seem to like it," said Chris dryly, and passed on.

Oh, for God's sake, stop it, he thought. She's not for me, nor I for her. But his mind went on automatically. It was not that she would take the high road while he took the low. It was the question of two lives with different objectives, not to be reconciled. Every woman, Beverly or any other, would demand time, claim the right to love and her own romance. And what could he offer her? A tired man irritable at times worn with the burden of other people's troubles—a man who battled all day for power over sickness and death, and dared to abdicate only at night when at last he slept.

He remembered one of the interminable months before laying down the law after the fashion of all internes.

"We doctors make rotten husbands."

"The hell we do. Who told you that?"

"Well, look at it. A man who is really set on getting somewhere in medicine or surgery can have only one job and that's it. He can't strike a balance. Either he's a good husband or he's a good doctor. He can't be both."

The room was cold, and after darning the furnace Chris went down and stoked it. It did not soothe him to find that the light in the cellar had been left burning, or that the coal in the corner was getting low again. Nobody had taken out the ashes, and after a momentary hesitation he took off his coat and did that also. But the contrast between his recent memories of the Lewis house and his present occupation set him to grinning.

He put down the ashes and, standing on the porch, proceeded to dust himself as well as he could. Out-lined against the soft snow in the yard was the shed where Henry had pursued his futile experiments, and he stood gazing at it and thinking of the legacy Henry had left him.

He stared at the shed more closely. Certainly it had an unusual aspect. The next moment Caesar growled, and a figure detached itself from the shadows, and a familiar voice spoke.

"Hello, Doc," he said. "Family here?"

It was Dick. A different Dick, nattily dressed, but looking up at him with shifty eyes and his old impudent grin. "I've been throwing pebbles at the window up there, but the old man sleeps pretty sound."

"The old man's dead, Dick."

"Dead! When'd that happen?"

It was characteristic of Dick to express no grief, nor to feel any. He looked thoughtful for a moment and then came up the steps. "Might as well see Mother. She still here?"

"She is still here."

He looked relieved at that and stepped past Chris into the kitchen. "Same old smell," he commented briefly. "I'd know Mother's kitchen with my eyes shut. Well, I'll go up, Doc. Night, I suppose my old room's still there?"

Sudden anger flared in Chris. He blocked the way to the back stairs with his body and confronted Dick with his hands clenched in his pockets, afraid to draw them out.

"The room is there, but you're not using it. Get that, and get it now."

"Aw, say, Doc—"

"You can see your mother and sister, and then you're getting out. I'm supporting them, but I won't support you!"

"Who asked you to?"

"That's fine! And that's all there is to it. If I find you sleeping in that room, I'll drop you out the window. That goes for tonight and all the other nights."

He waited until Dick had gone up the back stairs. Then he moved forward, putting out the lights as he went, and climbed rather heavily up the stairs.

Dick did not stay. Chris, falling into a heavy sleep after an hour or two of waiting, wakened in the morning to find that Dick had gone and that his own pockets had been neatly rifled of all the money he possessed.

He went down to his breakfast in a fury of indignation. But Lily Walters defeated him that morning, as up to the very end she was to defeat him. She was overflowing with happiness. Her faded eyes shone, and she had even tried to make herself neat. She beamed at him as she brought in his coffee.

"Wasn't it wonderful, Doctor? And he looked so well, too. Did you notice that suit he had on?"

"Very good suit. Better than mine! Is he working?"

"He has been. He's a good boy, Doctor. He even left me a little money. And he says there will be more where it came from."

"Well, he did. He said—"

But Chris was laughing. The impudence of Dick's farewell was part and parcel of the whole domestic situation. He laughed helplessly and almost hysterically until even Lily became suspicious.

"I don't see what's funny, Doctor."

"I'm sorry. I'm not laughing about Dick. Heaven forbid that I should laugh about Dick. He's been no laughing matter."

He sobered, but she was still puzzled when she left the room. And Chris knew then that he could never tell her the truth. She had too little to take away what was left. Yet later on he was to wonder whether he should not have done so after all; if he might not have saved her her final humiliation by so doing, perhaps even her life.

For all its apparent gaiety, the spring opened rather cheerlessly in the house on the hill. Beverly watching her mother, found her languid and rather withdrawn and suspected that she was sleeping badly.

Annie Lewis would get up, bathe slowly, dress meticulously. She had lost weight, and her handsome dresses hung loose on her; and her pallor was so marked that she had bought a box of rouge and kept it carefully hidden. Now when she sat in front of her dressing table, she rubbed in a little of the color, smoothing it carefully with her well-kept hands and then examining herself in a strong light. She could deceive Staunton, but she was afraid of Beverly's young eyes.

How long she could keep up the masquerade she did not know. She had made her decision carefully. There had been a time when something might have been done, but it meant mutilation, and there was no guaranty of cure; so she had sat in her chair in a New York surgeon's office and calmly shaken her head.

"Not now. Perhaps later. You see—" she had paused, groping for words—"it isn't only that I hate the idea. I'm afraid, of course. But even you admit that it is rather late, and I should like to go on as long as possible. Maybe you find that hard to understand, but a woman might, I think. The instinct for perfection can be a terrible thing."

He had stared at her. "You are not telling me that you are weighing your life against a slight mutilation?"

She had smiled faintly. "A chance for life, and not a good one. No, Doctor, I was thinking of my husband."

She had gone away then, feeling alone and blue, and had walked the streets for hours.... block after block, stores and people, carriages, wagons, automobiles, a wedding party coming out of a church, a woman shaking a crying child, a hand organ and a small monkey. Life all around her, and death in her breast.

Staunton Lewis, fastidious and resentful of anything that disturbed the order of his days. Beverly, vaguely suspicious and

Chemist Finds Way Of Improving Fuel

AKRON, May 16—A Texas chemist's discovery of a new method for producing an improved fuel from lignite was before the American Institute of Chemical Engineers today.

The process was described by a paper by Professor E. P. Schoch of the University of Texas, one of 32 reports on advances in chemical engineering slated for submission to the meeting.

By subjecting a mixture of lignite (brown coal) and light petroleum oil to heat in a closed vessel, Professor Schoch said, large amounts of water contained in the original mined product are removed.

The resulting product will have a heating value of 11,000 British thermal units to a pound compared with 14,000 BTU's for soft coal. He estimated a single plant could be constructed to produce 231 tons of lignite fuel a day at a cost of $3.15 a ton.

Other scheduled speakers include J. R. Steelman and H. G. Baker Jr., of the federal conciliation service. Dr. Webster H. Jones, dean of engineering at Carnegie Institute of Technology, will preside.

Book And Leornians Clubs Present Guest Day Program

More than 250 members of the Book and Leornians clubs and their guests enjoyed the delightful guest night dinner and program in the Presbyterian church last night.

Pink and green appointments were used on the tables which held center arrangements of pink snapdragons and white lilies. Programs were green folders in pink paper lace covers, tied with pink. Tri-corn china nut dishes with green borders were favors.

Immediately following the dinner the Leornians club chorus, directed by Miss Martha Krauss, sang two numbers, "Green Cathedral" and "Katherine's Wedding Day" and an encore number, "Sympathy".

Mrs. S. J. Broomall, Book club program chairman, introduced Mrs. Norma Frazelle Stolzenbach of Canton, dramatist, who presented the evening's program, assisted by Mrs. Ruth March, pianist, Samuel Davidson and George Shaheen.

Mrs. Stolzenbach, graduate of the speech and voice department of Howard-Payne university in Texas, maintains a studio in Canton. She is president of the MacDowell club, well known women's organization, in Canton and is known throughout this vicinity as a dramatist of exceptional talent.

The guest artists presented the following program: Sketch with music, Oscar Wilde's story, "The Selfish Giant," Mrs. Stolzenbach and Mrs. March; piano solo, "Liebestraum" (Liszt), Mrs. March; a short play, "A Lesson in Drama" (Clay Knowlton), Samuel Davidson and George Shaheen; piano solos, "Polish Intermezzo" (Paderewski) and "Cordoba" (Lecount), Mrs. March; and a book review, "Love in Fiction," Mrs. Stolzenbach.

At the conclusion of the entertainment, Mrs. W. D. King, president of the Book club, introduced Mrs. Kenneth Fuls, president of the Leornians, who thanked her officers, committees and associates for the year of pleasant associations and fellowship and for the cooperation they gave her in the club's activities.

Mrs. Fuls presented the gavel to next year's head, Mrs. Thomas A. Mercer. Mrs. Mercer responded, expressing a hope for a successful sixtieth season next year. The new president introduced her associate officers: First vice president, Mrs. Howard Morgan; second vice president, Mrs. John Holzworth; secretary, Miss Katherine Minth; treasurer, Miss Rebecca Harris; program chairman, Miss Mary Campbell; music, Miss Martha Krauss.

The presidency of the Book club was turned over to the new executive, Mrs. Rosa Clay, by Mrs. King, who presented her the gavel and closed her year's chairmanship with an expression of her appreciation for the friendship and loyalty of her club members, officers and committees. Mrs. Clay accepted the gavel, emblematic of her new office.

The program officially closed the 1938-39 season for both clubs. The Book club members will have a picnic June 20 at the Salem Country Club.

Among the many out-of-town guests attending the affair, a number of whom formerly were members of the clubs, were: Mrs. Robert Chandler of Akron, Mrs. William Smith of Hiram, Mrs. W. V. Anderson of Beloit, Mrs. George Frank and Mrs. Lester Roller of Alliance, Mrs. Carl Snell of Cleveland, Mrs. Ernest Dustin of Leetonia, Mrs. Newell Pottorf, Kingman, Kan., and Mrs. Paul B. Hankinson of Petersburg.

Gold Star Auxiliary entertained friends at a benefit card party in the V. F. W. hall Monday evening.

Prize winners were: Bridge, Walter Rich and Mrs. E. F. Miller; "500", Miss Marie McCarty and Paul Scullen; door prize, Mrs. Mary Green.

Lunch was served later in the evening.

The committee in charge included: Mrs. James Rhodes, Mrs. Bert Lesch, Mrs. Ed Tullis and Mrs. Mary Green.

Sparkle Bee Club Entertained

Sparkle Bee club members were guests last evening at the home of Mrs. Catherine Hiddleston, Aetna st.

Bridge prizes during the evening went to Miss Katherine Kailey and Mrs. Edwin Deagan.

The hostess served lunch after the cards. The table was attractive with lilies-of-the-valley and purple lilies.

Mrs. Deagan will entertain at her home on West Third st., on May 29.

Mothers Honored By Auxiliary

Mrs. Lena Tansil, oldest mother, and Mrs. George Buta, youngest mother, were presented gifts and accorded special recognition at a recent Mother's day program held by St. Mary's auxiliary of St. John's Evangelical church.

The affair was held at the Church of Our Saviour on East State st.

Mrs. Carl Willman To Give Talk

Mrs. Carl Willman will be guest speaker at a meeting of the Eiks auxiliary at the lodge home at 8 tonight. Lunch will be served after the meeting. All members are urged to attend.

Anne Adams Does Some Modeling

Just to show the publishers, assembled in New York City recently for the annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers' association, her inspiration for the perfect costume to wear when visiting either the World's fair or the San Francisco fair this summer, our own Anne Adams stopped off at the Waldorf Astoria hotel and displayed this smart costume at a fashion show arranged for the newspapermen and their wives.

It has the same excellent styling which you always find in our Anne Adams fashions, also the detailed instructions which women have found so simple to follow in making their own clothes.

The black and white checked dress is in the current "jeune fille" mood while the short red bolero, with its crisp white lapels, is for extra warmth when the air grows a bit chilly. The full, pleated skirt will feel cool, look graceful, and be comfortable for walking. You can make a costume just like this from Anne Adams pattern number 4160. It is designed in size 12 to 20 and size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards of 39-inch material with 1 1/2 yards of 44-inch for bolero. To order this pattern enclose fifteen cents in coins to pattern department, care of this paper, 243 West Seventeenth st., New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, size and pattern number.

Ohioans In Washington

Highlights On Legislative Activities

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Representative Vorys (R., Ohio), who will attend a formal garden party for the king and queen of England, wonders just how his cutaway coat is going to look.

Vorys, as a member of the house foreign relations committee, was invited to attend the party June 8 at the British embassy.

His trouble is like this: The coat looks green in the daylight, and the party is in the afternoon. "And it's only 17 years old, too," he lamented.

The invitation from the British ambassador read that he had been "commanded" by the royal pair to invite the Ohioan.

Approximately 1,300 invitations have been sent out, including those to members of the house and senate foreign relations committees, members of the cabinet and undersecretaries, and chairmen of standing committees.

The party is expected to be conducted like those at Buckingham palace. The guests will assemble before the monarchs arrive and must not leave until the king and queen have done so. Once or twice the royal pair may stroll through the garden. Because of the size of the party, it was not planned that they greet each guest individually.

If they did, Vorys would like to say, "I used to work for your dad." (He was a member of the British royal air force at the outbreak of the World war.)

Ohio Delegation Splits

The Ohio delegation split without regard to party lines in the successful house fight to boost flood control funds from $110,000,000 to $135,000,000 with Representatives Jenkins and Secombe, both Republicans, active on the floor in advocating the increase.

Jenkins maintained that the majority of the Republicans favored adding $20,000,000 to the non-military portion of the army appropriations bill to be divided between rivers and harbors and flood control.

"It is well recognized that we have been economists, or we try to be economists," he told the house.

He said he defied anyone to "show any place where the money has been spent more judiciously than along these rivers (in the Ohio valley) to keep the water out of the homes and business places of our people."

Secombe declared that not to appropriate the money would be "false economy" and asserted he would much rather turn $50,000,000 over to the army engineers, who may use WPA workers "and who get dollar for dollar in a more constructive program, than I would turn $50,000,000 over to the WPA to use politically."

Theatre Attractions

Wendy Miller and Leslie Howard in their roles of pupil and speech professor in "Pygmalion," satirical comedy, showing at the State theater today and tomorrow.

A mysterious treasure in gold and jewels, buried in an ancient castle by soldiers of King Charles 300 years ago, provides "Bulldog Drummond" with another adventure in "Bulldog Drummond's Secret Police."

The newest "Drummond" yarn will be the main picture on a double bill at the Grand theater Wednesday, with John Howard cast in the role of the dapper sleuth.

Contrary to his past experiences, which have sent him to points as far apart as Scotland and Africa, Howard finds adventure and a crime to be solved right under his very feet in the new thriller. For his own castle, where he and his friends have come to celebrate his wedding, turns out to be the burial place of the fabulous hoard, and the murder of a man who knows too much about it sends "Drummond" into action.

"On Trial," the engrossing courtroom drama which established its author, Elmer Rice, as one of the foremost playwrights of the present day, has been made into a motion picture, which is the second feature at the Grand Wednesday.

E. Palestine Park Project Launched

EAST PALESTINE, May 16.—A WPA recreational project got under way here Monday with a skeleton crew of trained workers directing until about 10 more can be added.

Supervision of the local softball league will be one of the first tasks to be undertaken.

The program includes not only sports and athletics, but playgrounds, hobby and handicraft clubs, music and drama. The aim is to afford everyone an opportunity to participate in some form of recreation.

It was begun here through the efforts of the park commission. The city's only expense will be purchase of a few pieces of equipment.

The cast is headed by Margaret Lindsay and John Littel, and others who helped bring the vivid melodramatic tale to the screen include Edward Norris, Janet Chapman, James Stephenson, Nedra Harrigan, Larry Williams, William Davidson and Earl Dwire.

The screen production also opens in the courtroom where John Littel is on trial for murder, and then, as each witness testifies, the scene changes to the locale with which his or her testimony is concerned, and the events described on the witness stand are graphically re-enacted on the screen.

"Pygmalion" at State
"Pygmalion," film adaptation of Bernard Shaw's famous rib-tickling stage farce, is the State theater's attraction tonight and Wednesday. Leslie Howard is starred in the role of the phonetics professor who, on a bet, transforms a London gutter-snipe into a duchess with hilarious consequences, both for himself and the girl.

East Liverpool Keeps Its Place In Sun As U. S. Pottery Center

EAST LIVERPOOL.—The East Liverpool district, with five major potteries in operation today is a greater pottery-producing center than ever before in its century-long history of ceramics.

And this is true despite the claims of the old-timers who remember when there were 36 plants in operation in 1879 and 45 in 1915.

True, there were more potteries in the yesteryears, but today's big plants turn out millions of dollars worth of ware annually and have between 7,000 and 8,000 employees on the payroll.

In 1879, for instance, there were 22 potteries employing about 2,000 workers—but at that time the total production of earthenware in the United States was valued at only $4,000,000.

By 1893, there were 29 plants and in 1899 the total was 36. East Liverpool then was fighting Trenton, N. J., for the title of pottery center of America.

But the total production then was valued at only $3,500,000 and employment was between 5,000 and 6,000 men, women and children. Production is valued today at $15,000,000 to $20,000,000—let the old-timer hop that hurdle.

During the hundred years since James Bennett built the town's first pottery in 1839, there have been 150 pottery firms and decorating shops in the district. Some lasted only a few years, but all contributed to the district's ceramic history.

In 1867, the Harker Pottery Co., then the largest in town and known as the George S. Harker pottery, employed the grand total of 60 workers and shipped a thousand barrels of ware annually. The total value of its yearly production was $40,000. The firm used $500 worth of straw each year.

Days at Child Labor
When 1879 arrived, the 22 potteries employed 2,000, of which about one-third were children of 10 to 15 years of age. Those were the real child labor days.

The peak year in number of plants was in 1915 when there were only 6,000 persons at work.

Until 1915 there had been no concentrated effort to make the potteries cleaner places in which to work. That year was a milestone in pottery history.

At the United States Pottery convention that winter a resolution was passed to keep the shops clean and as sanitary as possible. One of the health precautions was to wash down the walls of factories twice a year to settle dust.

In 1922 there were 33 potteries in the district. That year also marked the last general strike. The slow process of elimination of the smaller shops and their consolidation with larger manufacturers dates from this period.

Smaller Potteries Pass

Until that time East Liverpool had a pottery on virtually every corner and kilns instead of trees sprouted up in backyards. With the passing of the smaller potteries went the final traces of a number of undesirable features of the early shops. The most important ones were child labor and unsanitary working conditions.

Today, the five leading potteries in the East Liverpool district are the result of the mergers that began 17 years ago.

The Homer Laughlin China Co. alone has 3,200 employees on the payroll.

In the "good old days" when the average number employed in one pottery was about 200, it would require 15 or more of these potteries to equal the present employment list of Homer Laughlin company and quite a few more to equal it in production. During the first three weeks of April this pottery shipped 79 carloads of ware in addition to two sent daily by motor freight.

Thus have the "good old days" of pottery manufacturing vanished forever and in their place is a local industry employing a greater number of adults, making more ware, paying higher wages and occupying factories equipped with mechanical devices providing working conditions far beyond the most exaggerated dream of the pioneer potter.

HOUSE PASSES APPROPRIATION

$315,500,000 State Expense Bill Goes To Senate Today

COLUMBUS, May 16.—Challenged by Democrats as belying Gov. John W. Bricker's economy claims, a bill appropriating $315,500,000 for Ohio government expenses in 1939-40 went to the senate today with overwhelming approval by the house of representatives.

Republicans contended the appropriations totalled nearly $500,000 less than was spent during former Gov. Martin L. Davey's last two years in office while still providing substantially larger allocations for old age pensions and the school foundation program.

Ten Democrats approved the bill in voting for passage of the bill shortly before last midnight while 20 Democrats and two Republicans lined up against it after four hours debate.

With one major exception, the bill was passed as recommended by the house finance committee, including $20,000,000 for poor relief and three per cent slash in salaries and wages items.

The Republican majority turned down, 37 to 29, an extensive amendment by Michael A. Feighan, (D-Cuyahoga), minority floor leader, who sought to trim $2,322,000 from the measure.

Rep. Paul H. Ballard (R-Jackson) led a successful fight, however, for slashing approximately $2,000,000 intended as the state's contribution to the public employees retirement fund, now financed only by deductions from employees' paychecks.

The state's contribution was required under a law which became fully effective only this year. Unless the house recedes from its position, the new act will be inoperative.

Feighan also sought unsuccessfully to write into the bill what he termed an "anti-graft" provision. It would have prohibited paying commissions on state business to anyone except "established brokers" or regular employees of the seller under a penalty of a $500 fine or one to five years imprisonment.

Hits Snag
A little earlier, a Republican-sponsored bill aimed at fraud and graft in state purchases struck a snag in the senate because of the announced opposition of Ed D. Schorr, Republican state chairman.

Republican senators received from Schorr, just as the night session began, virtually identical letters which called the measure "an extremely bad bill" and urged delay in considering it.

The house-approved measure, fixing a fine of $10,000 and two years imprisonment as the penalty for conspiring to defraud the state, has passed the house and was on the senate calendar for a vote, but action was delayed to give Schorr an opportunity to present a memorandum outlining his objections.

Official comparisons of the appropriations bill with Davey administration expenditures were not available.

Shows Reductions

Rep. R. R. Bingham (R-Cincinnati), chairman of the house finance committee, argued "on the whole" with an independent analysis that showed these reductions:

1. Cuts of approximately $3,200,000 in general revenue fund items for salaries, wages and maintenance; against this there was appropriated the emergency board $1,600,000 or about half the indicated savings.

2. Reduction of nearly $2,500,000 in capital improvements, new buildings and the like.

3. Slashes totaling more than $2,000,000 in overhead of the highway department, releasing this amount for new construction.

"The test will be in what was spent at the end of 1940, not in the appropriations," said Bingham, pointing out that the emergency board might seriously decrease the apparent savings.

the WPA for the board of education. He said it was of satisfactory design, with good concrete work.

Double of Private Contract

The total cost was $544,566, he testified, with the sponsor paying $126,367. Under questioning, Post said the cost per seat was more than double that of a comparable stadium built under private contract.

Shillito also related that he learned ex-service men were let out when WPA crews were reduced in East Liverpool, O., failing to be given the preference ordered by national WPA headquarters. A complaint from the Workers' Progressive organization, Shillito said, led him to discover that on April 7 Charles H. Newlen, of East Liverpool, and 17 other former service men were dismissed in Columbiana county.

His investigation disclosed, he added, that Everett Reed held a WPA job at East Liverpool, although his wife and daughter were employed and a son was in a CCC camp. Oak Hudson, also of East Liverpool, worked for the WPA while making $75 a month through working for a steel mill on his off days.

Board Confers On Pottery Walkout

SEBRING, May 16.—The Sebring labor board was to meet this afternoon to decide on the course of action to be taken by local labor forces in view of a walkout at the Limoges China Co.

The Limoges plant was forced to shut down Monday morning when its 725 workers declared a "holiday" and left their jobs in protest against the hiring of a member of the technical staff to whom they objected.

Management of the plant termed the walkout a violation of the agreement by which the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters and the United States Pottery association govern labor policy. Plant heads stated that N. B. O. P. President James M. Duffy of East Liverpool had not authorized the strike when he conferred with a special committee of workers Saturday.
